

QUESTIONS GRID

Challenging	Clarifying	Concluding	Comparing	Developing	Examining	Predicting
I disagree. Have you thought about this example?	Can you give an example of what you mean about this issue?	What is the most important point here and why?	Do you think people would respond differently if this happened in the 21st Century?	What is the meaning of...?	What questions are raised by this?	Do you think this kind of thing could happen again in the future?
You say this but what about...?	Makes sense. Can you explain your ideas in more detail?	I would like to add this final idea...What do you think?	How do you feel about these two experiences from the First World War?	Who do you think made the better choice and why?	Explain why you see this differently?	What do you infer from this?
I'm not convinced. Can you convince me more?	I need to clarify something, what do you mean when you say...?	Yes, but don't you think that this changes everything...?	How does this compare with...?	Interesting point, do you think it could also mean...?	What have we forgotten and need to analyse in more detail?	What do you think we will discover later?
I'm not sure. Where is the evidence that proves this?	Can you tell me more about this example?	How did you come to this conclusion?	How does this comparison help you to understand the situation?	What are the implications of this?	Read this again. Do you notice anything new?	What challenges do you think they might face?
Can you challenge his or her point?	Have I paraphrased what you said correctly?	What information is the most important to the least important in this debate?	Which event is important and why?	How can we prove this?	We need to dig a bit deeper... why did this happen?	What could happen next?
How is this an important point? Justify your thinking.	Am I right in thinking you mean this?	What conclusions can you draw?	What is similar and different about these examples?	How can we develop this argument?	Let's look at this more closely... give yourself a minute to think. Any new ideas?	What do you think these person's actions say about him/her?
What about if you looked at this from another viewpoint... Does that change things?	What makes you think that?	What was the main trigger for what happened?	Is this event from 100 years ago similar or different to now?	Can you tell me more?	Can you make any further judgements about this?	What lessons have you learnt from this and which could help you in your life?
